

SCIENCE TEACHING AND LEARNING

- Young children develop ideas about science from their life experiences.
- New experiences lead children to challenge previous naïve ideas.
- A balance between exploration and thinking, reasoning, and theorizing provides a strong basis for learning.
- Inquiry that leads to science learning takes time.
- When guided, children have the ability to engage in all aspects of the inquiry process.