

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Redleaf Press's Early Childhood Activities for a Greener Earth wins Learning® magazine's 2014 Teachers' Choice Award for the Classroom

ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA—November 2013—Learning® magazine has announced Early Childhood Activities for a Greener Earth as a 2014 Teachers' Choice Award for the Classroom winner. The book will be spotlighted in the January 2014 issue of Learning.

For 20 years, Learning magazine Teachers' Choice Awards have heralded the very best in classroom-tested, teacher-recommended products. Each year, a nationwide panel of teacher-judges names the standouts in books, classroom supplies, educational games, websites, and more—everything teachers need in the classroom. After receiving top ratings in two rounds of rigorous judging, Early Childhood Activities for a Greener Earth was named as a winner in the classroom category. More information on the award can be found at www.theeducationcenter.com/learning/teachers-choice-awards/go.do.

Early Childhood Activities for a Greener Earth, written by Patty Born Selly and published by Redleaf Press, is filled with more than 100 activities to help children ages 3–8 learn about and care for the earth. The activities encourage children to develop a sense of wonder, curiosity, and joy for nature through experience and play. Each chapter focuses on an important environmental topic—including waste reduction, recycling, air quality, weather, climate change, and energy reduction—and provides information to help adults present the topics to children in developmentally appropriate ways. Early Childhood Activities for a Greener Earth helps to excite children, engage families, and encourage the community to be green. The book is available through Redleaf Press.
