

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

When You Just Have to Roar!* receives positive review in *Kirkus Reviews

Saint Paul, Minnesota – February 5, 2014 – Redleaf Lane’s When You Just Have to Roar! written by Rachel Robertson and illustrated by Priscilla Prentice has earned early praise from well-known Kirkus Reviews.

Each month, the expert staff at Kirkus Reviews receive and curate thousands of new books. A positive review from the respected publication is considered an honor and an opportunity to let booksellers and readers know about note-worthy products.

About When You Just Have to Roar!

Children can be loud and boisterous, so what do you do when you have a whole room of them running, drumming, and roaring? This delightful story is perfect for mischievous children and those that care for them.

The beautiful illustrations capture the exuberance and innocence of the diverse group of students as they play and explore. They are not being naughty; they are just being children. When their teacher, Ms. Mya, explains positive expectations to them the classroom becomes a happier place for all. A reassuring explanation of how children should behave in school and how expectations can be a good thing.

About Kirkus Reviews

Since 1933, Kirkus Reviews has been a trusted source for discovering the best in books. Each year the expert staff reviews over 10,000 books from traditional publishers and self-publishers. A review in this revered source is considered an early indicator of a book’s potential and remains an honor for publishers and authors 80 years after its’ founding.
