

A close-up photograph of a baby's face, with their hands covering their eyes. The baby's mouth is slightly open, and their skin is a soft, pale pinkish tone. The background is a plain, light color.

JACK-IN-THE-BOX

Push a stuffed animal into a plastic container or oatmeal box. Put the cover on. Sing a short song and open the lid when the song is over. Make a fun expression. Do it again. I will learn to expect the animal to pop out when the song is over.

Because of interactions with you, by the time I am 6 months, I may have already developed 1,000 trillion new connections in my brain.
